

HOW CAN YOU LEARN MORE ABOUT COERCIVE CONTROL?

helpful resources

Advocating for freedom
from violence

ARTICLES YOU CAN READ:

Law Society Journal NSW: "Criminalising Coercion"
by Amy Dale

The Sydney Morning Herald: "Intimate terrorism: why the murders of Hannah, Alliyah, Laianah and Trey must spark change" by Madonna King

Marie Claire: "Australian Government Looks to Scotland to Improve Domestic Violence Laws around Coercive Control" by Grace Back

Mamamia: "Hannah Clarke's murder was a different kind of abuse. Here's what it looked like" by Billi Fitzsimons

Now to Love: "How coercive control laws differ across Australia"

The Sydney Morning Herald: "Debate rages among family violence campaigners over criminalising coercive control" by Jewel Topsfield

PODCASTS YOU CAN LISTEN TO:

The 7am Podcast: "Could we end domestic violence?"

Featuring special guest Bri Lee speak on the changes that must be made to ensure women and children are safe.

Good Weekend Talks: "Coercive control and domestic abuse"

Hear guest speakers Madonna King - author of November cover story 'Sins of the Father' -and Jess Hill - author of award-winning 2019 'See What You Made Me Do' - talk about the possible criminalisation of coercive control in Australia.

Real Crime Profile: Bonus Episode -Coercive Control in Dirty John

Laura Richards and Lisa Zambetti have a lot more to say about the Dirty John series; where a serial stalker and domestic abuse perpetrator coercively controls his victims and stalks them upon separation.

EN(GENDER)ED Episode 2: Evan Stark on "Coercive Control"

as a gendered liberty crime - Evan Stark, sociologist and forensic social worker, wrote the prize winning book Coercive Control: How Men Entrap Women in Personal Life which helped stimulate the new crime of “coercive and controlling behaviour” throughout the UK and helped broaden the conversation around the world.

BOOKS YOU CAN READ:

Coercive Control: How Men Entrap Women In Personal Life, Evan Stark

Written long before coercive control was taken seriously in domestic violence cases, this book explores the critical importance of non-violent control of intimate partners, and breaks through entrenched views of physical abuse being the most serious form of abuse.

See What You Made Me Do by investigative journalist, Jess Hill

This book examines the complex nature of domestic and family violence in Australia and on an international scale. The text is an extremely thorough exploration of our criminal justice system and what needs to be done.

Criminalising Coercive Control: Family Violence and the Criminal Law,

By Marilyn McMahon and Paul McGorrery

This book considers whether coercive control (particularly non-physical forms of family violence) should be prohibited by the criminal law. The book considers the new offences that have been introduced in England and Wales, Ireland and Scotland.

SHOWS YOU CAN WATCH:

Dirty John : This two season Netflix series is based off true stories that examine coercive control and domestic abuse. Each season explores the nature of power and control and how these elements manifest in relationships through dramatic reenactments of the real life tales.

See What You Made Me Do : Jess Hill's bestselling book will be brought to life in a three part documentary series on SBS in 2021. The series will expand on Hill's findings in her book on domestic abuse in Australia and on an international scale.

